THE STATE TAX.

The State Journal has had an interview with the secretary of state on the question of a state tax, in which he says: "It is true," as stated in a Milwaukee paper, Mr. L. E. Hume, said a State Journal reporter to the secretary of state, "that the state board of equalization has decided that it will not be necessary to levy a state tax."

"It is not true," answered the secretary, "for the simple reason that the state board of equalization has nothing whatever to say on the question whether a state tax shall or shall not be levied. The only person competent under the law to decide this matter is the secretary of state himself. It comes within his province, and the state board of equalization has no duties except the equalization of the assessment. No, I cannot state at this time whether a state tax will or will not be necessary, because the assessment is not complete, and until it is finished there are no figures before me on which I can base calculations."

It has been nearly ten years since a state tax has been levied in Wisconsin. The state government has been managed with such wise economy for many years that it has not been necessary to call upon the people for a cent in the way of taxation for state purposes. All this is very commendable, but it is possible to place too much trust in the ability of railway companies to pay all the expenses of the state government year after year. The frequent shortage of crops, the competition among railways, and other causes tending to reduce business, attach more or less uncertainty to the receipts of the companies. The state is growing larger, and as a matter of course, the annual expenses of the government are increasing, so that it would be a marvel indeed, if the state could go on indefinitely without levying a state tax. No other state has done such a thing, and no other state dare attempt it.

But with such a fortunate condition of things surrounding the state treasury, it is nevertheless the exercise of official wisdom not to place too much confidence in the amplitude of railway, telegraph and express receipts to pay the cost of running the state government at all times. It is better to be on the safe side, and all intelligent and far-sighted people, regardless of their political affiliations, will endorse the policy of a state tax levy, if that was thought to be the safest thing, so that there would be no possibility of a default under any circumstances.

Of course Secretary Timme is thoroughly acquainted with the needs of the treasury, and is fully competent to judge as to the advisability of making a state tax. The whole matter is in his hands, and whatever is done by him, will no doubt be the right thing to do.

There seems to be more trouble with the census this year than ever before known in the history of the country. Why is it "troubled"? The fault cannot certainly attach to Commissioner Porter, and the supervisors, are, as a rule, competent for the task. The trouble appears to lie with the enumerators in many cities. They were, in a large number of instances, selected in the great cities for political reasons. They were out of employment, and therefore wanted something to do. It would seem from the published press reports that these enumerators have been in many cases totally unfit for the business. They were slow, dull in comprehension, indifferent as to how they did the work, and ignorant of the common rules of propriety. The smaller cities like Janesville fared well. But one has only to take the city paper to see how numberless were the errors made by the enumerators. In Milwaukee, for instance, the citizens want to make a correction of the census at their own expense. According to the report of the enumerators the town will have but 198,000, while many hundreds, and possibly thousands, have been omitted. The friends in Minneapolis are so great that three of the enumerators have been arrested.

It will be a real surprise to the Methodist people here, and in fact everywhere in the state, to hear that Rev. E. G. Updike, recently of Milwaukee, has accepted the pastorate of the Congregational church at Madison. The call was unanimous, which shows that the Madison Congregationalists have confidence in the man, and that they can trust him without a candidate sermon, which was not required of him. The following sketch will throw some light on the subject in hand:

Rev. E. G. Updike is one of the most prominent pulpits in the west, and has been for some years considered one of the leading members in the Wisconsin M. E. conference. He was connected with Sumnerfield M. E. church, Milwaukee, for three years and an active light was made by the congregation for his return for two years under the new law passed a year ago, which extends the pastorate over five years instead of three. The bishop, instead of granting this request, sent Mr. Updike to Appleton, and the Sumnerfield people refused to accept the services of the minister assigned to them, Rev. Mr. Creighton. The feeling stirred up was very bitter. Mr. Updike was then transferred to Englewood, and the relations between the bishop and Sumnerfield church are still strained. Mr. Updike much preferred to stay with Sumnerfield, if he accepted the pastorate of the Madison church it will be on account of the action of the bishop.

Disagreements in the Methodist conference have caused the loss of several of its best preachers, namely, Rev. Dr. Carhart, now practicing medicine in Texas; Rev. Mr. Fawcett, now pastor of the First Congregational church at La Crosse; and Rev. A. A. Hoskin, an independent preacher in Milwaukee. The Congregationalists of Madison are to be congratulated on securing as able a successor to Dr. C. B. Richards.

FARM AND GARDEN.

Good cattle and poor pastures will not prove profitable.

No lawn can stand cropping continually without fertilizers.

It is said that ensilage or roots have a fine effect on growing clover.

Land which will produce good clover will uniformly yield good wheat.

The heifer is at the best for breeding the first time when she is about 2 years old.

Always water plants in the evening, and never when the sun is right over them. Do not water them too often.

Among the New England and York State farmers, the milking vocation is almost exclusively done by men and boys.

Using the long scion and a short root is claimed by many nurserymen to be the only true way in root-grafting operations.

Do not use paris green on potatoes too frequently. It requires but a small quantity to prevent damage from beetles, and should only be applied when needed.

We and this hint in an exchange: "If your neighbor has let the mortgage from his farm, while your last year's interest is unpaid, go over and ask him how he did it."

Good stock will not thrive or prove profitable except under the most favorable conditions, chief among which is a full supply of food adapted to the purpose required of the animal.

Every two weeks take brush and can and thoroughly paint the roosts with kerosene. About once in two months during the warm season give the interior of the hen-house a good white-washing.

Sheep prefer short grass and thrive best on pastures that permit them to grow close to the ground. All fields with heavy growth of grass may be mowed to advantage before turning on the sheep.

Those who have transplanted egg-plants should keep a close watch over them. The potato beetle will leave the potato for the egg-plant and require but a few hours to have all the plants destroyed.

The capacity of an animal should be utilized to its fullest extent and to fail to provide it with everything required to secure the greatest possible production from the animal is to throw away the principal advantage in its ownership.

An up-town policeman went to church last Sunday. When the collector came along with the plate the policeman coolly exhibited his badge and the collector passed on.

"How does your husband spend his time evenings?" "He stays at home and thinks up schemes to make money." "And what do you do with yourself when he is thus occupied?" "Oh, I think up schemes to spend it."

Two girls were chatting in London Market. "I'm frightfully economical," said one. "There wasn't a day last week that I didn't haunt the bargain counters picking up things that will come handy."

BROKEN BUGGIES.

A Collision on South Main Street Last Evening.

Last evening there was quite a serious smashup on South Main street. About half past eight o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Geo. L. Carrington were driving down the street when they collided with a buggy, in which Mr. Thomas P. Burns and a young lady were riding. Mrs. Carrington was thrown out, but not seriously injured. Both buggies were quite badly broken, but otherwise no damage resulted.

PROBABLE DOUBLE MURDER AT MORRIS, ILL.

Mrs. Decker and Her Son Fatally Wounded by Midnight Marauders—Two Arrests Made.

MORRIS, Ill., June 27.—White-haired Mrs. Frank Decker and her son, Charles Decker, a well-to-do farmer, were the victims of a double murder early this morning. The clanging of fire bells called 200 people to the Decker home, on the outskirts of the city soon after 3 o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Decker were found unconscious on the floor, their skulls crushed by the blows of heavy bludgeons. Clots of blood covered the beds and the prints of bloody hands were to be seen on two of the window casings.

Burglars were heard entering the Decker house soon after midnight. The noise aroused the household, which, besides Mrs. Decker and her mother, consisted of a hired girl, Ellen Shaw.

"Who's there?" Mr. Decker shouted. The only response was the flight of the thieves. About 2 o'clock the thieves returned. They made a quiet entrance into the house, went to Mrs. Decker's room on the south side of the building and made a murderous assault upon him with a bludgeon. His cries awakened Mrs. Decker and Miss Shaw, who were sleeping in the next room. Their movements were heard by the burglars and they entered the room. Mrs. Decker sat up in bed, but was knocked down by a blow that rendered her unconscious. I suppose her helplessness the savage blows of the club fell again and again. With each blow the shivering girl, who lay unconscious in another corner of the room, heard a curse of fury as the crashed bones and the mangled and quivering flesh of the white-haired old woman were paying a debt of hatred.

Miss Shaw waited her chance and sprang from her bed to an open window. As she touched the ground the two men dashed after her. The club, whirled at her head, went wild, and she darted away among the trees in a race for her life. Clad only in her night dress, she crouched in a thicket close to the fence nearly a quarter of a mile from the house. The murderers passed within feet of her, beating the bushes with a piece of fence board, but were finally driven by their fear to give up the search and make their escape. As they disappeared among the trees the frightened girl crept from her hiding place and ran to the house of a neighbor. From there the alarm was spread.

Hundreds of men gathered at the house within twenty minutes after the fire alarm was sounded. A bottle of chloroform was picked up near the house, the label bearing the name of C. J. King, druggist, Chicago. Two arrests have been made. One, a big fellow hailing from Coal City, is thought to be innocent. Against the other, a medium-sized, dark-complexioned man, there are many evidences of guilt. Mr. Decker and his mother are still unconscious.

ROBBED BY A BOY.

A Daring Youth in Pennsylvania Holds Up a Paymaster.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., June 27.—An extraordinary robbery was perpetrated today at a little mining town six miles from here. Jacob Atkinson, paymaster of the H. C. Frick Coke company, was counting out the wages for his men and placing the money in envelopes when a youth, about the age of sixteen, six miles from here. Jacob Atkinson, paymaster of the H. C. Frick Coke company, was counting out the wages for his men and placing the money in envelopes when a youth, about the age of sixteen, six miles from here. Jacob Atkinson, paymaster of the H. C. Frick Coke company, was counting out the wages for his men and placing the money in envelopes when a youth, about the age of sixteen, six miles from here.

The muzzle of a bull-dog revolver glaring him in the face, backed by the determined face of a young fellow of 18, caused Atkinson to throw both hands up. He was in his office at the time at a side window and half a hundred men were at the front of the house, but out of sight. He was about to call to his men for help when the cool young fellow said: "One word and you are a dead man."

The rogue then gathered up the envelopes, containing $1,100 in all and backed toward the heavy bushes leading toward the hills. Atkinson raised an outcry when two bullets were sent crashing through the window above his head. The daring robber escaped to the hills toward West Virginia. His name is Perry Donaldson, aged 18, who has always been looked upon in the village of Oliphant as bad, but harmless. A sheriff and posse have hunted him in to West Virginia, but have not yet captured him.

KILLED BY AN INTERPRETER.

Trouble with the Indians at Cheyenne Agency—Threats Against Upshaw.

HEXA, Mont., June 27.—News has just come from the Cheyenne agency that Jules Seminoles, the agency interpreter, has killed a Cheyenne Indian. It was issue day, and the Indians gathered at the agency in large numbers, including those who recently were engaged in fortifying their camp. Seminoles' discharge had been asked for by the Cheyennes, who thought he was too good a friend of the whites to be kept.

Seminoles surrendered to Maj. Carroll, but the Indians demand his return to them and threaten to take him away. As Maj. Carroll has three troops of cavalry there is not much danger of this. The whites present at the killing say it was done in self-defense. Just a little while ago the Cheyennes tried to take Upshaw's life and he was only saved by the quick action of Seminoles. Of all the Cheyennes Seminoles is the most reliable friend of the whites.

PAIN-IN-THE-FACE STABBED.

The Famous Indian Chief Lying at the Point of Death.

STANDING ROCK, N. D., June 27.—Rain-in-the-Face, the noted Sioux chief, ranking next to Sitting Bull in the renown gained in the Custer massacre, lies at the point of death. The chief was stabbed in the chest and side several times by his wife, who entered his tent while he slept. She was jealous of another Indian woman, to whom Rain-in-the-Face had been paying considerable attention lately.

Treasurer Hemingway Convicted. JACKSON, Miss., June 27.—The jury convicted ex-Treasurer W. L. Hemingway upon the count in the indictment for embezzling money from the State treasury for his successor. All motions for arrest of judgment and a new trial were overruled and Judge Chrisman sentenced him to imprisonment in the penitentiary for five years, being the maximum term fixed by law for the offense.

Old Mr. Squires was shot in the stomach, but not fatally injured. Will Noland, in the crowd, was also shot in the stomach and probably fatally wounded. Intense excitement prevails.

Stage Robbers Arrested. SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., June 27.—James Moran and Joseph Berkeley, two of the men who robbed the Harbor Springs stage yesterday, are in jail here. They had all the watches and nearly all the money that was taken. Sheriff McKenzie made the capture. It is believed the third robber will be apprehended soon. The two men in jail admit that they did the work.

Abandoned With $50,000. ST. JOIN, N. B., June 27.—A Ferguson, a lumber operator at Sussex, has disappeared. Ferguson handled over $50,000 for other people, half of which was furnished by M. S. White. What disposition Ferguson has made of the money is unknown. It is thought he has gone to the States.

Killed His Brother-in-Law. LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 27.—John G. Schultz, a painter, shot and killed Fred Keller, his brother-in-law, last night in a family quarrel.

WISCONSIN MOONSHINERS. A Full Distillery Plant Captured by Government Officers Near Two Rivers.

MANITOWOC, Wis., June 27.—For the third time within five years R. Kaufman, a farmer, residing near Two Rivers, is in custody of the United States officers for this district, charged with "moonshining." The first arrest was made in 1885. Kaufman furnished evidence that the objectionable apparatus of his distillery, which was used for other than distilling purposes and was acquitted. In 1887 a like charge was made against him and he was convicted, fined $100, and sentenced to thirty days' imprisonment. Deputy Collector Bibbington of the Manitowoc district, has been watching the premises closely, and to-day captured a full distillery outfit and considerable whisky.

Kaufman will probably be arraigned before the United States court in Milwaukee.

Will Meet Next in St. Louis. PITTSBURG, Pa., June 27.—At the afternoon session of the International Sunday-school convention the nominating committee presented a long list of the vice-presidents and members of the executive committee. Quite a contest then took place between St. Louis, Chicago, Denver, Los Angeles and Toronto for the next International convention in 1893, but Chicago withdrew in favor of St. Louis and that city was selected.

Don't Want Lands in Severity. SHAWNEETOWN, I. T., June 27.—The Potawatomi to-day, when the papers were being formally signed, became involved in a row among themselves. The Shawnees objected to receiving the land in severity, saying they preferred to roam at will as heretofore. When told they must take land in severity and live like white men, they left the camp in a body.

The Philadelphia Not a Big Success. NEW YORK, June 27.—The United States steel cruiser Philadelphia is not so much of a success as was anticipated. From vague information received late to-day it is gleaned that she did not break all records, as it was confidently expected she would do, and that at any rate the Cramps will not receive the $200,000 for exceeding Uncle Sam's requirements.

Close of the Sanitary Convention. BATTLE CREEK, Mich., June 27.—The sanitary convention has adjourned after a successful meeting. A number of interesting papers were read and discussed, among the subjects being "The Best Methods of Sewerage," "School Hygiene," and "Ventilation of Buildings."

George Bancroft Very Ill. NEWPORT, R. I., June 27.—Hon. George Bancroft, the historian, is very ill at his residence here. He is suffering more from debility caused by old age (he is upward of 90) than from any special ailment. It is feared this is the beginning of the end.

Montreal Shipping Ice to the States. MONTREAL, June 27.—New York and Boston merchants are here contracting for large shipments of ice. Twenty thousand tons were shipped to New York to-day and large contracts are being made to be carried out in July and August.

COMMENCEMENT DAY.

The Class of '90 Graduate this Afternoon at the Congregational Church.

NINE YOUNG LADIES COMPOSE THE CLASS.

The Decoration of the Church—The Essays Delivered and General Description of the Exercises.

To-day is commencement day for the Janesville high school, and the girl graduate held full sway at the Congregational church. The term "girl graduate" has a significance in this case, as the class consists of nine young ladies—Amy Bowles, Katherine Agnes Clark, Helen Agnes Gately, Margaret; Ellen Joyce, Lucie Minor, Agnes Loretti Morrissey, Anne Holmquist, McNeil, Sybil Agnes Nash, Jessie Belle Ziegler—while the boys are conspicuous for their absence.

The church was handsomely decorated with evergreen and flowers, the work of the Junior class. The platform upon which the graduating class were seated was finely decorated about the edges with evergreens and flowers, while the piano was feebly hidden under sweet smelling blossoms. Over the back of the platform an arch of evergreen had been erected from which was suspended in white letters "1890" and the class motto, "The End Crown's the Work." It was finely put and looked very pretty.

At a few minutes past two Mrs. Lewis played an overture on the organ, after which Smith & Anderson's orchestra struck up a march "Apollo." When the nine young ladies attired in becoming white dresses, marched to their places and took seats upon the platform in a semi-circle with Supt. Stewart, Rev. S. P. Wilder and president of the school board, Ogden H. Fethers, on their right.

All the young ladies looked charming and all carried bouquets and flowers.

Rev. S. P. Wilder then invoked the divine blessing.

The exercises this year were a new departure from previous graduation exercises, in the fact that only three essays were read, decided by the standing in their studies.

The salutatory fell upon Miss Helen Agnes Gately, her subject being "The Point of View," and was as follows:

The Point of View.

The position from which one looks at anything is important. A hill seems steeper to one standing at the foot than to one at the top. Since no two bodies can occupy the same space at the same time, no two persons can occupy the same standpoint or have the same point of view. As this is physically true as to places and perspective, it is also true in relation to the standpoint in human life. Strictly speaking no two persons can have the same point of view for it can never happen that two persons have exactly the same ideas relating to any subject. The great variety in opinion existing on any topic arises from this difference in point of view.

Any subject of discussion is like a mountain or hill, when one stands at the foot of it but one side can be seen. This side may be rocky and rough and covered by a growth of stunted trees; this gives the observer no idea of what the other side is like, and he cannot know until he goes around and looks at it from another standpoint. Very likely it is smooth and grassy and shaded by beautiful forests. The side or phase of the subject under discussion seen from one person's point of view is entirely different from that seen from another's. And the subject cannot be judged fairly until it has been looked at from all possible points.

During the civil war, at Lookout Mountain, was fought "The Battle Above the Clouds." While the armies were fighting, a mist rose at the side of the mountain. The Union soldiers, at the top, were fighting up through a cloud while the Confederates, at the top in clear sunlight, were firing into what was to them a dense fog at a concealed enemy. In this case two different standpoints, a description of the battle given by a soldier in one army from that by one in the other.

A person's views depend largely on his standpoint. Take the case of the persons of similar views or opinions on all subjects, if such could be found, and place them under the influence of a different education and association, and there would follow as widely apart as the two surroundings. A good education, therefore, elevates the standpoint and widens the views. But often education is one-sided and leaves people prejudiced. People take for granted many of those things that have frequently been told without the trouble of investigating them. In this way poor dog Tray gets a bad name. The time of life makes a difference in the way we look at things. For the child the past is enough; he has no regrets for the past, no fears of the future, but takes the present as it is, and enjoys it to the utmost. As he grows a little older, he is full of plans for the future; for him the past is small, the future great. He is always striving for the greater joys and the better things that seem just ahead. But when he reaches old age, he looks on the past; for him the past is all there is no earthly future. The sun shows brighter and life is sweeter when he is young. Time has thrown the mantle of forgetfulness over the bitter experience of the past; he is free to dwell on the sweet memories of long departed days. The youthful man like the youthful man, is progressive, hopeful, enthusiastic in his views for the future, while the old man, looking back on the decline of his life, is always pointing to the glories and great achievements of the past.

Even though it be unbecomingly, the beliefs of the times mold and shape the opinions of every one, making them entirely different from what they would have been a year ago.

Many people think that the law is too harsh in some ways, as for instance, in punishing a thief. Looking at the matter from the point of view of the governed one would be inclined to agree with them. But it is different when seen from the standpoint of the law-maker who knows that the law is not for the governed but for the offense committed, but that the punishment must be severe enough to deter others from committing a similar offense. If punishment does not accomplish this object, it would be of no use whatever, for no punishment can do anything to the offender. For instance, people think it hard that a sentry, who perhaps had marched all the night before, should be shot at for falling asleep for one minute at his post. But when he falls asleep for one minute the enemy might have surprised them and captured the key to the defenses or destroyed the fort. Then not only his life but the lives of many of his countrymen would pay the forfeit for his short sleep. Does it repair anything to hang a man because he took another life? Does it give back the life that is lost? No! Thereby many lives are saved, because this consequence restrains many from committing crime. From the way people talk when a man is hung, for instance, it would seem that he had done something terrible.

The human mind has a tendency to cling to custom and tradition, yet those who break these bonds, and leave the beaten paths of thought trodden by their ancestors, are the men whose lives shine out like beacon lights above that sea of oblivion which has engulfed their contemporaries.

The champions of progress in science, religion and politics were the men, who, while exploring the regions of thought, brought new ideas, principles and statutes maintained them against certain ridicule, and probable persecution and death.

Looking backward to history we see among the first martyrs in the world, the Grecian philosopher, Socrates, whose great work was breaking down the prejudices and showing the ignorance and superstition of the times. He was killed for his principles, and his name is still a name of honor.

The Grecian magistrates took the matter in hand and passed upon him the sentence of death. For, they say, "he does not believe in the gods, and he is teaching these pernicious doctrines to our youth." Even the fear of death did not deter him from teaching his convictions, and his last hours were spent among his pupils.

When we read of the peoples of the past, how clearly we see the absurdity of their strange beliefs and peculiar customs. We wonder how they could have been so blind as to let every age and every nation are like individuals, they see the faults of other nations and times, but are oblivious to their own.

Our modern Socrates, Edward Bellamy, is a student of the veil and we looking through the eyes of another generation, laugh with them at our follies and our superstitions.

Progress—reform in everything, must be the motto of the future. We are clinging to a lot of the outworn rubbish of the past. To be (preferably) to keep on in the same old ways, we are every day making progress, because we fear they may move our present ideas false.

Are they worth the keeping if we cannot stand the test? Are we honest enough to tell the truth to every age? Are we brave enough to stand up to the questions of to-day? These are some of the many questions which every man must ask and answer for himself. No Socrates, no Bellamy, no Jesus, and no other, any of reformers are generally not true.
